February 23, 1933 - April 5, 2017

Vergie Deloris Stubbs, 84, passed away due to natural causes Wednesday, April 5, 2017, at Cox South Medical Center in Springfield, Missouri. She was born February 23, 1933, in Siloam Springs, Missouri, the daughter of Zeke and Minnie (Collins) Stubbs. Vergie was never married.

She grew up on the family farm in Siloam Springs, and attended Star School, where she graduated from the 8th grade. In the 1970's, she moved with her mother from the farm into town in Willow Springs. She lived there until 2009 when her health no longer permitted her to live alone. At that time, she moved to Houston, Missouri, where she lived with her niece. She enjoyed going to yard sales, listening to bluegrass gospel music, tending to her flowers, but her love was her nieces and nephews. She loved spending time with and spoiling them. She attended The Church of the Brethren for many years, and had invited Jesus into her heart at a young age. She was of the Baptist faith.

Vergie is survived by one brother, Wayne Stubbs and his wife, Dorothy of West Plains; her many nieces and nephews, and even great, and great-great nieces and nephews; many cousins, and her many friends. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

She is preceded in death by her parents, Zeke and Minnie (Collins) Stubbs; two sisters, Agnes Stubbs Murrell and Vernia Stubbs Collins; four brothers,

“ Vergie, you will be deeply missed. My mother, Leah Collins who passed away last August was truly one of Vergie's best friends. I remember going to Vergie's house with my mom (on auction night) and listening to them both tell stories of their youth. They grew up together, and they would giggle about some of the mischief they would get into. When Vergie came to my mother's funeral, I reminded her of those good memories about my mother, and though Vergie was sad, she grinned. I remember her saying, "I declare" a lot which made me giggle too. I find comfort in knowing that my Mom's childhood best friend and cousin are both together, probably giggling up a storm. Rest In Peace Vergie.
